Questioning, tip line turns up leads

Father of Levi Frady turns himself in

By Beth L. Chester and Michael Kurtz

Authorities investigating the murder of 11-year-old Levi Frady may have gotten a break in their investigation.

Although investigators say they still aren't ready to make an arrest in the case, they finally got a chance to interview the boy's father, Milton Frady, after he turned himself in to Forsyth authorities on non-related charges Wednesday morning.

Levi was shot to death sometime between 6 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 22 and 2:30 p.m. the following day. His body was found by a group of Gilmer County deer hunters on state wildlife management land in a wooded Dawson County forest.

While remaining quiet about specifics of the interview, Dawson County Sheriff Billy Carlisle said agents were able to get some helpful information from the long-awaited interview, saying Frady has "cleared up some areas where we had questions." Agents began following up on those leads Wednesday afternoon.

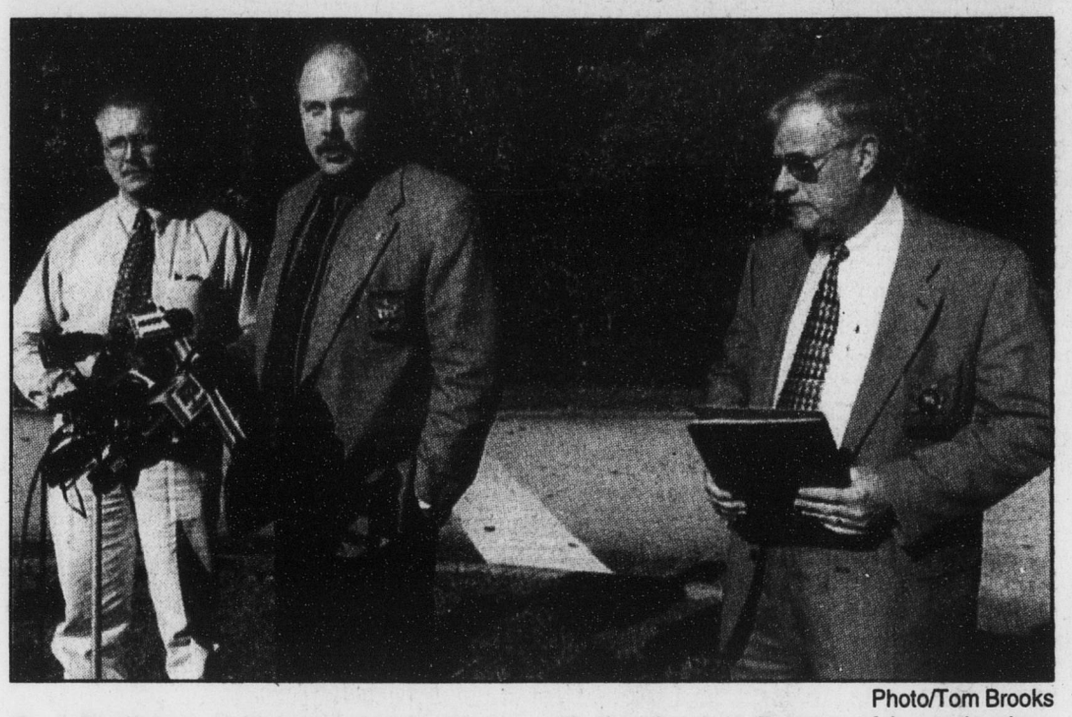

But as of Wednesday night, Carlisle said an arrest in the case was not imminent, unless other information surfaced. He says no one has been eliminated as a suspect.

Atlanta attorney Michael Hauptman was by his client's side when Frady was interviewed at the Forsyth County Detention Center by agents from the Georgia Bureau of Investigation and the Forsyth and Dawson counties sheriffs' departments.

Officials had made it clear they wanted to talk to the 37-year-old construction worker, anxious to find out what – if anything – he might know about his son's death.

Dawson County Sheriff Billy Carlisle said he is "happy Frady finally came forward," saying the slain boy's father is "no more a suspect than anyone else – just as before." Carlisle has said authori-

Milton Frady is loving father, says his mother

By Beth L. Chester
Staff Writer

Milton Frady's mother Sarah says her son had nothing to do with the murder of his son, sixth grader Levi Frady. During an interview just hours after she brought her son to the Forsyth County Detention Center, Sarah said Milton could not have played a part in her grandson's death.

"I don't see how they could suspect him because he was at home," she said of the night her grandson disappeared. "When we came home from work, Wednesday, Milton was sitting on the porch." That would have been about 5:15 p.m. she recalled. "He stayed there – he even called" his children's home that night, Sarah said. "He calls them every night and every morning."

When he called that night, Sarah said he was told his son had gone to a neighbor's house. Sarah said he called again the next morning and spoke to Laci but said no one told him Levi had not come home until later that day.

Explaining that Milton loved his children, Sarah said, "He's been wanting" to come forward since his son was found dead. "He wants the killer found, too." Sarah said her family wants to help: "That's why we brought him here," she said, adding that her son was at the search site Thursday looking for his child with other volunteers.

Park project faces funding crunch

By LeAnne T. Bell

Looking at bid proposals of $300,000 more than budgeted for the second and third phases of development at Sawnee Mountain Park, the Forsyth County Board of Commissioners was faced with a decision at the Oct. 27 meeting.

"We don't intend to build and start a park and not finish it. We are not known for not finishing a project," said Commissioner Lamar Suddeth, who was asked by chairman Bill Jenkins to address the issue because of his experience in the paving field.

"I think with Jerry (Kinsey) running the show down there" the projects can move ahead provided that the expenses not exceed $2 million until after the first of the year. Suddeth said Kinsey could manage the work so that "they can check with us at the beginning of 1998." Hopefully, the county would have additional funds to continue with the remainder of the work, including a community pavilion.

However, Suddeth said, "The deal with the Threatt property down the road, we don't know what that will bring us."

The past county administration condemned acreage which was to be used for development of a wastewater treatment facility. The price which the county will be ordered to pay for the land has not yet been set through the courts.

Suddeth's motion included the provision for Kinsey to coordinate project cost management with the contractor and come back to the board in January on the additional funding. The total bid was $2,392,550 for the project for which $2 million in special purpose sales tax dollars were earmarked. Jenkins provided the second to the motion which was unanimously passed. Kinsey was advised to get with the Parks and Recreation board about the park

Daves Creek golf subdivision needs regional center approval

By Luke Johnson
Staff Writer

Members of the Forsyth Planning Commission got their first look at the plans Tuesday night for a proposed golf course community that will take up approximately10,000 acres when fully developed.

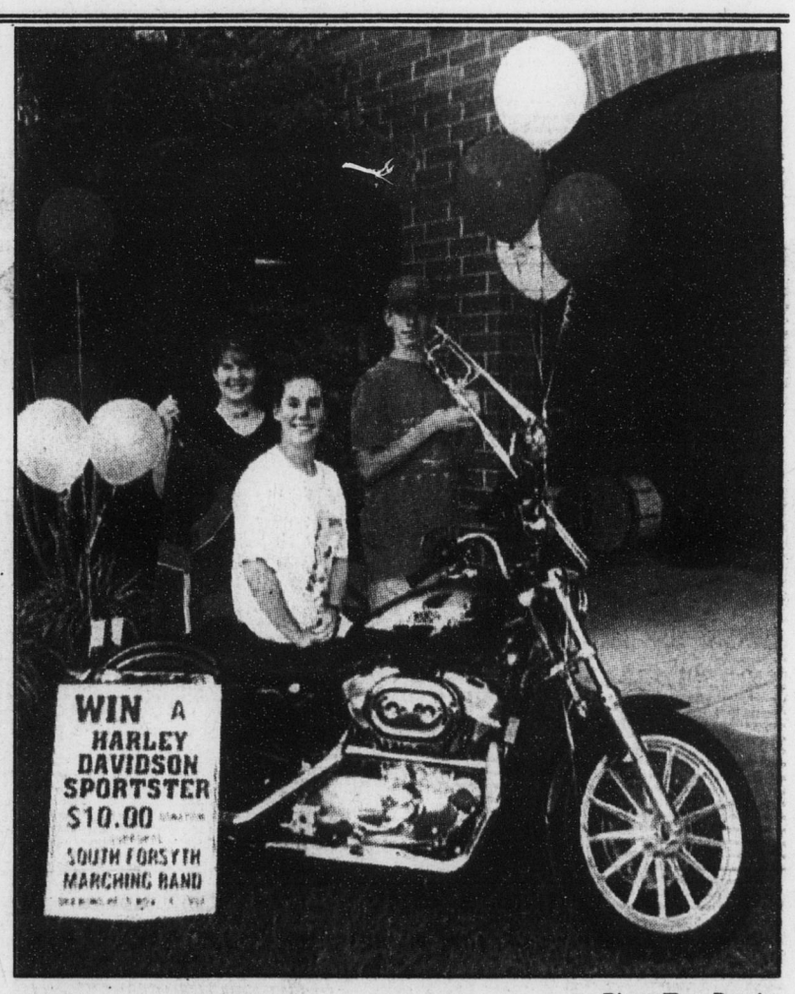

The project is to be built east of Trammel Road and south of Hwy. 20.

But they ran into a snag because the project has not gotten approval from the Georgia Mountains Regional Developmental Center.

At first, the five-person planning board, led by chairman Dennis Martin, said the clearance would not likely be ready before the first of the year.

Bill Evans, who also developed the Fox Creek subdivision, said "I read the letter for the plan one way and my lawyer saw another."

Motorcycle stolen
The South Forsyth High School's band boosters club was auctioning this $8,500 Harley motorcycle to raise money for the band uniforms – until someone stole it Tuesday. The club was offering chances to win the motorcycle for $10. It is now unlikely the band will be getting new uniforms since ticket proceeds will be directed toward the purchase of a new bike. The club will keep its commitment to those who bought tickets. See story on Page 2A for more information.

Commissioner asks for Grand Jury investigation

By Michael Kurtz
Staff Writer

Commissioner Andy Anderson is asking District Attorney Garry Moss to look into a possible leak in the grand jury procedures.

In an Oct. 9 letter, Anderson said he has seen at least two incidents in which information of ongoing investigations has ended up in the hands of the media.

"I feel there has been a serious breach in our judicial process," states the letter.

Anderson said he is concerned the confidential nature of testifying before a grand jury has been violated. Witnesses can be called to testify in front of grand juries about subject matter including personnel records, business transactions and other sensitive matters. Anderson said he is concerned about that information getting out.

"I will be reluctant to discuss anything in front of them," he said.
