FRADY from 1A

Though television news reports have suggested investigators view revenge against one of Levi's relatives as a likely motive, Hallman said that report did not come from official sources. He would not discuss possible motives.

Likewise, Hallman would not confirm reports that crime lab technicians found fingerprints at the crime scene, saying that information did not come from authorities. "I haven't heard anything about prints from the crime lab this week," he said.

Meanwhile, as of the Forsyth County News' Friday night deadline, Levi's father, Milton Frady, remained incarcerated in the county detention center on unrelated charges. Following a Wednesday bond hearing, Frady's attorney, Michael Hauptman, had said he expected his client would be released by Friday.

At that hearing, Superior Court Judge Frank Mills indicated he would approve a bond – provided Frady could locate an electronic monitoring company willing to fit him with a personal surveillance device. Hauptman said the company which normally provides that service locally doesn't want to get involved in "high-profile cases" but said he felt certain he could locate another company to take the case.

Mills directed District Attorney Garry Moss to work out the terms of the bond with Hauptman. A previous report erred in stating Judge Stan Gault presided at that hearing. Frady is being held on a 1995 bench warrant for failure to appear to stand trial for his alleged involvement in a 1994 burglary.

Grand opening for Goody's Clothing held

By Sheri Toomey
Staff Writer

Grand opening festivities commenced at Goody's Family Clothing Store Thursday morning.

Cumming Mayor H. Ford Gravitt welcomed the store into the city.

"We're glad to have you in the community," said Gravitt, who commended Goody's on the beautiful job management and staff had done on the store. "I can see my wife down here right now Christmas shopping."

Gravitt and store manager, Linda McCullers, cut the ceremonial ribbon.

Margaret Hutchinson, representing the Cumming-Forsyth County Chamber of Commerce, welcomed Goody's "as another jewel in the crown of our retail stores."

"Goody's exemplifies Forsyth County's values regarding family and a sense of community," said JDN Realty Corporation representative Shana Webb.

The store is part of the JDN development in the Cumming Marketplace off Hwy. 20 along with Home Depot and Wal-Mart.

Goody's was started in 1952 in Athens, Tenn., said Mike Teeple, regional vice president. There are 38 Goody's operating in Georgia including this one.

On Thursday, Goody's also opened a new flagship store in Knoxville, Tenn, said Teeple, who added the company was publicly owned.

Goody's also recently opened stores in Ohio and West Virginia.

The grand opening celebration continues through Tuesday.

MEETING from 1A

Conditions set by the planning commission include: a minimum 1,500 square feet of heated floor space for each house, two-car garages, a traffic study and road improvements at the expense of the developer.

McCar Development Corporation will also request residential rezoning for 73 acres on Bethel Road. The planning commission recommended approval for this request.

Powertel Inc. will request tower rezoning for a 180-foot telecommunications tower on McGinnis Ferry Road. This is the second tower zoning request in the county after a separate zoning category was created to control tower placement by the commission in March.

The company is in the process of building a wireless communications network across the southeast.

In other business, the board will adopt a resolution and present a plaque to former Commissioner Bob McGuinn in appreciation of his service to the board. McGuinn was appointed by Gov. Zell Miller to serve on the board in July. He stepped down after Commissioner Julian Bowen was found not guilty on charges regarding false statements made to obtain special permits for a house he built in 1994.

Monday's meeting will be held at 5 p.m in the commissioners' meeting room on the second floor of the administration building. That session will be followed by a public forum at 7 p.m.

LANIER TECH from 1A

Since the school is affiliated with Gainesville College, all diploma programs offer an associate's degree option as well. Students planning to earn associate's or bachelor's degrees may begin taking core classes such as English, algebra, history and physical education at the Forsyth campus. Those credits will transfer to any school in the university system of Georgia.

Thanks to the Georgia Helping Outstanding Pupils Educationally (HOPE) Scholarship program, almost anyone can attend classes at the campus virtually free of charge. Willis says it doesn't matter what your age is, what year you graduated or what your grade point average was. If you have lived in Georgia for 12 months, have not recently been convicted of a felony and have not defaulted on a federally-guaranteed student loan, HOPE will pay all of your tuition and even provide up to $100 per quarter for textbooks.

Willis says he and his staff are eager to begin helping Forsyth County's residents enroll.

"We are excited and eager to get everyone ready for school so students can be on their way to well-paying and rewarding careers," Willis said.

Administrators had planned to offer a program in licensed practical nursing, but Willis says that will have to wait. Students in that program must complete a significant amount of their training in actual clinical settings, and the local hospital doesn't have enough patients to meet program standards.

Willis said administrators had hoped North Fulton Hospital would be willing to help train the licensed practical nurses, but management there only offers assistance to registered nursing students and declined to help.

"Once Baptist North expands has more beds, we will be able to start the program," he said, expecting a delay of about two years.

Admissions personnel will be available at the bank during regular banking hours: Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.; Friday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m.; and Saturday 9 a.m. to noon. For more information, call 781-2430 or 781-2498.

GRAND JURY from 1A

The commission is strongly urged by the grand jury not to use their positions to influence others since this is disruptive and detrimental to the chain of command.

"I don't know of any commissioner who uses his influence to do anything," said Suddeth.

Anderson said he would never do this and didn't know of any other commissioner that did.

The grand jury strongly recommends contract workers report to a department head instead of the board which disrupts the chain of command as well as interfering with morale.

Jenkins said a good manager should be able to build a team with staff members and contract employees and the situation should be reviewed if any employee could not function in this situation.

Bowen said he preferred the tenure system used by educators which requires renewal and review of annual contracts.

Kieffer said the board shouldn't micromanage county business.

The grand jury recommended the board hire a purchasing manager to report directly to the county administrator. The board had advertised for a finance director to report directly to the board. The purchasing manager will report to the finance director.

Working together as a board instead of in a group of 3-2 or 4-1 and open communication lines between members was also recommended by grand jury

Jenkins said he had not noticed this pattern.

Kieffer said taxpayers were not adequately represented when a commissioner was left out of the loop.

"I have good communication with most of the board members," said Anderson.

A new ethics policy as well as a county audit of all departments that have not been audited in the past two years is also recommended by the grand jury.

In addition, audit results should be discussed immediately with department heads and administrators.

Also in the presentments, voters in the county are charged with researching candidates and government officially in office before casting their ballots.

"If we'd done that all along it wouldn't have been so hard for the new board to get the county back in shape," said Jenkins.

A grandmother's plea

TO THE EDITOR:

From the Levi Frady family: We know somebody out there knows something about Levi's disappearance. It's so hard to say murder. That's what it was, murder, and we have to live with that every day of our lives. He was only riding his bike home on Little Mill Road between 6-6:30 p.m. Oct. 22. He was so precious and special but we know that we will never get him back. The only thing we can do for him now is to make sure nobody else has to suffer what Levi went through, at least by this person or persons. It could have been anyone's child and we don't want anyone to go through what we're going through. We didn't know a person could hurt so bad and still be alive. With God's help, we will go on but we will never stop hunting his murderer. So please, please, somebody help us. If the reward won't make your come forth, maybe our cries will.

The heartbroken family of Levi,
Janice Hamby, Levi's grandmother

WATER from 1A

On Friday, Commissioner Andy Anderson said he had received a Wednesday morning phone call alerting him that a structure in Etowah Trails was "direct-lined" to county water with no water meter and there was a possibility of a leak.

"It was my responsibility to report it," Anderson said. "I knew it was Kieffer's subdivision but I didn't know whose house it was."

Anderson said he was advised by phone Thursday night by county officials that the permit for the house was in John Kieffer's name. He said the house was apparently being used as a real estate sales office, though he had not confirmed it.

Tim Perkins, county water department director, said he had a list of six or seven other similar situations that he has turned over to the Sheriff's Office for investigation at the advice of the county attorney.

"This has been a common problem in the past," said Perkins, who added the county now requires developers to obtain a water meter before a building permit.

No water meter had been purchased for Kieffer's house in question, Anderson said he was told by the water department.

Other counties have a problem with this as well but not the manpower to curb it, said Perkins.

"No matter who you are, this is not going to be tolerated," Anderson said. "If you are caught, you will have to answer for the consequences."

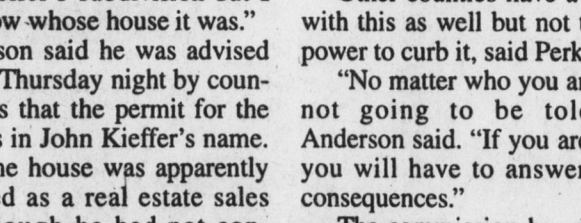

The commission has discussed getting tough on water violators after an audit of the county's water department showed significant water losses for which the department needed to account.

Sheriff's Office Spokesperson Karleen Chalker said the matter was still under investigation.
